

How we've helped our clients

Identifying the right way forward to support a major business transformation

We helped a large dairy producer analyse how best to reorganize their supply chain to support a major transformation designed to standardize their procedures and processes and realign the business model to their strategy. We used Supply Chain Navigator to drill down and gain a detailed understanding of the impact and effect of the business model and changes to the supply chain. We were able to help our client focus on the right areas, identify the necessary process details and levels and benchmark against leading practices. This played a critical part in helping them define their way of doing their business in future

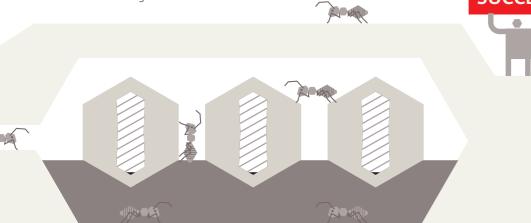

Our client was able to thoroughly investigate and understand what to do to reconfigure their supply chain because we modelled it to a real practical level of detail. They were also able to understand the interdependencies.

Assessing the supply chain and how best to improve it

We worked with a medium-sized European consumer goods company to assess whether their supply chain organization and set up supported what they actually wanted to achieve. Based on our in-depth maturity assessment we benchmarked their existing supply chain and identified the areas to focus on to improve the overall operations.

Aligning supply chain KPIs to the needs of the business

We carried out a rigorous supply chain KPI assessment for a manufacturing company. We assessed their controls and were able to identify the necessary measures to redefine the controlling framework and focus on the right areas of the supply chain. With the supply chain KPIs realigned to the business, our client was in a better position to draw the right conclusions and make the right decisions.

Supply Chain Navigator | Service Overview

Do you have the right KPIs in place to support your supply chain strategy? How well are you performing against these KPIs? If you need to change them, how do you go about it? What are the right areas to focus on for your supply chain strategy? Do your processes have the right level of maturity to support your business? How does your supply chain match up against best practices? You need to be sure you have the right answers to these and other critical supply chain questions. We can help.

What makes our solution such a game changer

We can help you design your supply chain from end to end, from your strategy through to your operations – enabling you to benefit from a truly transformational supply chain solution.

We apply a consistent methodology from strategy to operations. Our solution incorporates both leading practices and the required level of maturity to support your overall supply chain strategy. This consistent end-to-end approach is a unique advantage of our Supply Chain Navigator.

Rich and relevant content

A key differentiator is the rich and relevant content contained within our Supply Chain Navigator. We are not offering a theoretical model. On the contrary, we have developed a highly powerful and practical tool full of the detail that makes all the difference. From industry-specific processes and models to KPIs and best practices – we have added the essential information. Armed with this content, you can really see and feel the reality for different areas and aspects of your particular supply chain. You can only get this level of connected detail and understanding from our solution.

Client-focused expertise

Our Supply Chain Navigator combines rich and relevant content geared to deliver a truly transformational end-to-end solution. But the other key differentiator is our experience and client focus. We are business consultants with technology understanding and implementation expertise, so we don't just help with strategy we also help to genuinely transform your business, ensuring real positive change in your supply chain. To this end, we will work closely with you to make sure you have the optimum supply chain solution for your business.

Gaining a genuine and detailed end-to-end understanding

Our content rich end-to-end solution enables you to gain a genuine and detailed understanding across your whole supply chain – from strategy through to operations. We don't stop at a superficial level – we go into deep and precise detail on, for example, what leading practices look like, so that you can gain practical answers that are not just relevant to your sector but to your business. As a result you are able to see clearly both the big picture and the fine detail and therefore take the right decisions and make the right changes with greater confidence and conviction.

Truly transformational

The end-to-end scope and rich content in our solution enables you to be truly transformational across your supply chain. Armed with a genuine understanding of the critical business issues on a detailed level, with our help you can implement improvements, overcome challenges, align processes, update systems – transform and optimize from end-to-end, from the strategic foundation of your supply chain through to the things you do daily to manage your supply chain.

Reconnecting your supply chain strategy and operations

As your business evolves, the connection between your supply chain strategy and operations inevitably comes under strain, weakens and may even break. We can help you reconnect your strategy and operations.

Staying aligned

Our solution can also help you keep your supply chain aligned and on track. It guides you to what to look at, what to focus on, what to change and improve – and how best to go about this ongoing optimization.
